"BLAINE, A TRAGEDY."

A Drama For the Stage, Which Will Not Be Enacted In New York.

An American playwriter has been for some time engaged in the composition of a drama of contemporary life in which the chief character is to be a famous American statesman, now deceased. The title which he has chosen for it is "Blaine, a Tragedy." It certainly looks like bad taste to dramatize, at least in this generation, the career of the American hero named, but the author maintains that he can do it inoffensively and in such a way as to dignify his subject, as the life of Mr. Blaine was full of dramatic material, and as there were scenes in it which would be especially serviceable for a drama of real life. He says that Shakespeare made use of personages who lived not long before his time, and even of some who were his contemporaries, and he gives the names of other playwriters who have used their acquaintances in their stage compositions. When reminded that even the greatest and most picturesque Americans of past times, from the days of Washington to those of Lincoln, had never been used successfully for dramatic material, as Shakespeare used the kings of England, he replied that this was a thing which would surely yet be done in this country, as it has been done in other lands, and that, in any event, it is his purpose to begin the undertaking.

"Is there any manager in New York," we asked, "who would bring out your tragedy?"

"I do not know, but there is a manager in Chicago who will bring it out if it suits him."

"Do you not fear that there would be a storm of popular reprobation if you should make your chief character resemble the original?"

"If there be anything of the kind, or if the work fail to prove attractive, it will be withdrawn after the first or second performance. But there are in my subject such striking elements for a first class stage drama and for a winning one that I shall not think of its failure until after it has failed."

"Would not the relatives of the deceased statesman object to the work and get out an injunction against its performance?"

"If such an objection shall be raised by any one entitled to speak with authority, or after that one has been present at a performance of it, it will be discontinued. The man of my title role has been a subject for painters, sculptors and other artists, and there is no good reason why he should not be made a subject for dramatic artists."

After the playwriter had expressed the views here reported, The Sun reporter asked a theatrical manager as to the prospects of a drama of the kind spoken of. He answered that he did not believe a single respectable manager in New York or anywhere else would bring it out, and that, if brought out in any American city, it would be a flat failure. He believed that the execution of the playwriter's project would not be tolerated by the theater going community.—New York Sun.

An Apt Reply.

Napoleon's apt replies often excited good humor in a crowd. A large and brawny fishwoman once was haranguing the mob and telling them not to disperse. She finished by exclaiming: "Never mind those coxcombs with epaulets on their shoulders. They care not if we poor people all starve if they can but feed well and grow fat."

Napoleon, who was as thin as a shadow, turned to her and said, "Look at me, my good woman, and tell me which of us two is the fatter."

The fish fag was completely disconcerted, and the mob dispersed.—Exchange.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS and a careful microscopical examination of the urine, is a valuable aid in determining the nature of many chronic diseases, particularly those of the nervous system, blood, liver, kidneys, and bladder. These aids make it possible to treat such diseases successfully at a distance, without personal examination of the patient. Thus Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Inflammation of the Bladder, Gravel, and other Diseases of the Urinary Organs, "Liver Complaint," Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Dropsy and many other maladies are successfully treated and cured without personal consultation with the physician.

Nervous Debility, whether resulting from over-study, worry, disappointment, or from exhausting drains upon the system caused by pernicious secret habits contracted in youth, through ignorance of their ruinous consequences, is successfully managed, through correspondence, the necessary medicines being sent by mail or express. Write for question blanks, or describe your case, send sample of urine for analysis and enclose 10 cents for postage on treatise, which contains reproduced photographs and full names and addresses of vast numbers of people who have been cured in this way. BLAND'S FINANCIAL BILL.

Chairman Bland of the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures has prepared a financial bill which will probably be reported to the House at an early day. It provides that all coin obligations of the Government shall be paid in gold or silver coins and that such payments shall be made in such coins as may be most advantageous to the Government. For the purpose of providing the Treasury with such coins the duties on imports are to be paid one-half in gold and one-half in standard silver coins. To redeem the Treasury notes issued under the Sherman Act the bullion purchased under that Act is to be coined, not less than $10,000,000 every month. It further provides for restoring the free coinage Act of 1837, and revoking all authority to issue bonds or to increase the interest-bearing indebtedness. To meet the deficiency accruing in the Treasury and enable the Secretary to set apart coin to meet obligations of that character the Secretary is authorized to issue Treasury notes, which are to be receivable for all demands of the United States, except duties on imports.

This bill is in the interest of the people, not the Gold Syndicate, and the probability of its passage is therefore slight. It provides for utilizing the bullion now lying useless in the Treasury by coining it into legal tender money. It restores the coinage Act of 1837, which was surreptitiously repealed in 1873. It prohibits the Secretary of the Treasury from issuing interest-bearing bonds whenever the Gold Syndicate has a surplus of gold to invest, and prevents the increase of the interest bearing debt of the Government. It authorizes the Secretary to issue Government notes, greenbacks which bear no interest, when there is occasion to do so not to issue at will interest-bearing bonds to please Wall street.

Let such a bill as Bland proposes go on the statutes and there would be a general business revival throughout the country. It would put more money in circulation without expense to the Government and without increasing the interest-bearing debt, and drive dull times beyond the boundaries of the United States. But the "cuckoo" Democrats and gold-laced Republicans in Congress will not permit it and two or three newspapers and about one-third of the voters in Nevada believe in keeping one or the other of the parties in power.

THE HAWAIIAN REBELS.

The Department of State at Washington has been officially informed by Minister Willis that a courtmartial at Honolulu has tried thirty-eight of the revolutionists in the late attempt to restore the monarchy, and that two hundred more are to be tried. Gulick, formerly Minister, and Seward, who was a Major in the Federal army, both Americans, and Rickard, an Englishman, have been sentenced to death, and T. R. Walker, formerly in the United States army, has been sentenced to imprisonment for life and to pay a fine of $5,000. Replying to Minister Willis, Secretary Gresham says:

"If American citizens were condemned to death by a military tribunal, not for actual participation in the reported revolution, but for complicity only, or, if condemned to death by such a tribunal for actual participation, but not after fair, open trial, with opportunity for defense, demand delay of execution, and in either case report to the United States Government, the evidence relied on to support death sentence."

Of course it is the duty of our Government to protect the lives of American citizens, whether in Honolulu or any other part of the world, and to see that they have a fair trial when accused of crime. American citizens, however, ought to have been in better business than engaging in a rebellion to overthrow the Republic of Hawaii and restore the monarchy.

ENCOURAGING ANARCHY.

The United States Grand Jury in San Francisco indicted a number of men who were charged with being members of the American Railway Union, and as such implicated in the railroad strike last Summer. Two of the men against whom indictments were found when confronted with their accusers in open court proved that they had never been members of the American Railway Union, and had never been engaged in any branch of railroading and proved that they had been in no way identified with the strike or the troubles connected therewith.

The action of the United States Courts and officials in connection with the strike of 1894, is encouraging anarchy. If a serious offense resulting in loss of life is charged against the strikers, they are indicted and tried in the State courts, but if the offense alleged is uncoupling a Pullman coach from a mail train, the accused are indicted and tried in the United States Courts. In the Federal Courts, as has been proved in the San Francisco case, men were indicted and subjected to the humiliation of arrest and imprisonment for offenses of which they were entirely innocent. This treatment is not calculated to increase the respect of the people for the constituted authorities, and the maligned and injured citizen has no redress.

THE INSANE ASYLUM.

The Publishing Company or some of its stockholders jumps to rescue the late Superintendent of the Insane Asylum from imaginary assailants. No one has accused the ex-Superintendent of malfeasance or extravagance in office. Two years ago he asked for an appropriation of $85,000 for the Asylum for the years 1893 and 1894. The Legislature appropriated $80,000, or $5,000 less than was asked for. Now, with more patients in the Asylum than there were two years ago, he thinks $65,000, or $20,000 less than he asked for when in charge, will be sufficient for the ensuing two years. As, according to the report, $9,091 of the appropriation of two years ago was unexpended it indicates that the Ex-Superintendent's estimates were over $14,000 out of the way and that like many other people he is liable to err.

The JOURNAL does not care to dwell on this subject, what it has said is based on the reports of the Ex-Superintendent and the State Controller. It is not an expert in insane matters as some scribbler for the Publishing Company claims to be, and does not pretend to say as the Publishing Company does, that "everything about the place is now in excellent shape," whatever that may mean.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Legislative Reflections and Carson Observations.

THE COMING INAUGURAL BALL.

Our Solons Take Their Weekly Outing—Constitutional Amendments—Carson Firemen's Festivity—The Boss Wildcat and the Chief Hen.

[Correspondence of the JOURNAL.]

CARSON, February 9, 1895.

Both branches of the Carson Congress having adjourned yesterday until Monday an unusual number of the members left for home and outside ports, leaving the Capital to take care of itself. Some went to Reno or the Comstock, and some even ventured to slide over into California, trusting to luck and the wintry elements to get back on Monday and draw their regular weekly salary of $56. Carson continues to survive. However, at her normal condition. Thus far they have had little of general State importance to transact, but are willing to fill out the entire fifty day session in skirmishing up something to do.

But bless them for one thing, none of them seem to be desirous of getting up a lot of Constitutional amendments to be defeated or ignored by the people, as at the last general election. At least three weeks of the last session were aggravatingly consumed in that stupid way, which the present session bears in mind as a profitable object lesson in favor of a Constitutional Convention. Men, who through incidental political burrah changes, happen to get into the Legislature merely through social or local influence, as a sort of picnic, are not the men to amend any constitution.

Since reading the description of the recent Inaugural ball at Sacramento our Assembly has come to a square consideration of the possibilities of our proposed Inaugural ball to take place on the 25th instant. And the more especially do they consider it in view of their eargerly unanimous passage of Senator Patchen's bill of kiss and hug as rapturously as you like in private seclusion, but don't be fool enough to tell or brag about it afterward to outsiders.

Last evening Curry Engine Company had their grand annual ball at the Carson Opera House. It was a splendid success in every respect, crowded in attendance, the hall finely decorated, music good and everybody happy.

This morning a rancher brought in a huge wild tomcat. He had him in a stout cage and wanted to sell him to Tim Dempsey. He—the cat—measures fully six feet from tip of nose to tip of tail, and is in reality a lynx of extra size. Tim has no dog for a match tight with the beast, so probably he has found a market in the Chinese quarter, where wildcats are accepted as a choice eatable and command a good price.

J. A. Bird, formerly a painter in Gold Hill, father of Bird, the Reno grocery man, from his pension as an old war soldier has got himself a nice little ranch just north of Carson, upon which he lives very comfortably. He says he has a hen that has laid three eggs a day repeatedly—one a double yelk and the other single yelk. He set a lot of her eggs last season and sold the rest at a dollar a dozen, but not one of them hatched, yet that hen is not for sale.

The most effective method of preventing roughness, chapping and breaking of the skin is to use Cocona Balm. A few applications will render the skin soft and smooth and it costs only 25 cents per bottle. It gives satisfaction to all who use it.

PRESIDENT OF THE NEVADA BANK.

A Lunatic Fires at Him and Commits Suicide.

SAN FRANCISCO, February 9.—An attempt was made to shoot Isaiah W. Hellman, President of the Nevada Bank, this morning at 9 o'clock. Hellman left his house at California and Franklin streets to walk to the bank. At VanNess avenue William Holland fired twice at Hellman, who was not hit. Hellman then ran down to Polk and turned the corner and then Holland shot himself in the brain and is dying. Holland is well known on Pine street. He dabbled in stocks. Six weeks ago Holland was arrested at the instigation of the Nevada Bank, charged with forging the name of Wm. H. Wright, a member of the California Board. The Nevada Bank officials could not identify Holland as the payee of the check, so he was discharged from custody and no publicity given of the arrest. Holland, prided himself on his integrity. He was of a nervous temperament and the shooting was the result of brooding over the slight on his character. Hellman remained at home this morning, badly scared and unstrung. Otherwise he is all right.

Cable to Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, February 9.—The Senate decided that an amendment was in order appropriating $500,000 to begin the construction of a cable to Hawaii, by a vote of 36 to 25, which adopts the proposition.

THE ENGINEERS' GRIEVANCE.

The Revision of the Wage Schedule Will be Submitted to the Lodges.

The Grievance Committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has had another conference with the railroad officials in San Francisco. The proposed revision of the wage schedule was discussed at length, and the terms will be submitted for adoption or rejection to the various lodges of the Brotherhood.

It is believed that an amicable adjustment of the differences between the engineers and the railroad officials will be made. One of the members of the Grievance Committee is reported as saying that the engineers recognize the fact that this is no time to strike, even should there be occasion for a strike under ordinary conditions. There were too many idle men in the country ready to take the places of strikers. He added that the committee was very well satisfied with the terms it was getting and thought it would be able to bring back a good report to the lodges.

THE OPIUM HABIT.

Its Demoralizing and Degrading Effects.

CULTIVATION OF THE HABIT.

Its Fascinations, Hallucinations and Horrors Described by a Victim.

"Yes, I'm a fiend, as the opium smoker is termed. Don't I look it? I carry the sign in my haggard and sallow face, dialated eyes, the whites of which are tinged with yellow, and the peculiar restlessnes of the limbs. I used to have some shame and for a long time denied that I was a victim and tried in every available way to cover up the sign that I knew only too well was becoming apparent, but it has got the better of me now and I have lost all pride or shame, or whichever it may be called, that sometimes keeps a fallen wretch semi-respectable. I shun what were once my friends, and acquaintances I never make. The accursed tray with its flickering lamp and opium layout is to me what ambition, wealth, fame, happiness and knowledge are to other men. The rough couch, spread with coarse matting, is a downy bed, and the sputtering of the sticky mass, as it is held in the flame during the cooking process, is to me the sweetest of music. The odor that arises from the opium as it burns, while nauseating to those unacustomed to it, is as atter of roses to a fiend. Come with me and I'll steer you to a joint, and give you an object lesson that you may the better describe to your readers the art, that without doubt originated in Hell.

"How do we form the habit? Well that is hard to answer. Every fiend has a theory as to how he began and an excuse for not quitting. Some will tell you that the first pull at the pipe was simply from curiosity. It was tried again and the silent monster had them in its coils. Others will say that it was prescribed as a remedy for some imaginary ailment, and the use of it soon developed into an insatiable desire. Now and then a victim will be frank enough to admit that he took to it as a relief for mental or physical pain, but these are few, for suicide is easier, surer and the living death is avoided.

THE JOINT.

"Well, here we are, its a little dim but don't be afraid, you won't fall into any pit, simply be careful, save your head from bumps and follow me through this narrow and dingy passage."

Here is the door to the joint. We are obliged to gain admittance by a series of signals and a short dialogue fully understood by the fiend and owner of the joint. First a gentle drumming of the fingers on the door which is answered from within with "nay soy ah," (who is there.) The fiend replies, "un goi," (it is I.) From within comes, "noy soy un," (who is it?) A name is given that has been agreed upon previously and the Chinese words "hoy mon" (open the door.) The door is partially opened by the proprietor and if his inspection of the visitor is satisfactory he is admitted into a room with low ceilings, no windows, two or three bunks arranged on one side of the room and on the other a large flat couch covered with matting, on the center of which is the layout, the dimly burning lamp in the tray being the only light. The air is stifling and the reporter is anxious to escape, but his guide makes himself at home, converses with the Chinamen, throws himself down on the couch and begins preparations to "hit the pipe." This is a den where now and then occur scenes and orgies too revolting to be described, and yet the frequenters of these foul places are men and women, and sometimes boys and girls of tender age enticed within these walls to be, perhaps, forever lost to relatives and friends and the world, simply to satisfy the grasping and lustful celestial. Our guide proceeds to exhibit and describe what is called

THE OPIUM LAYOUT.

The habit is called "yen yon phon." The tray may be of tin or Japanese wood and designed according to the wealth of the proprietor of the joint. On this stands the lamp, "yen ong;" the pipe, "yen tem" or "tiung;" the pipe bowl, "yen ow;" the needle or small rods, "yen hock;" box to hold opium, "hop toy;" sponge to wipe bowl, "lem sue;" scraper, "yen gow;" opium, "hop."

The lamp is a small glass affair with a double wicking, covered with a glass globe with a small opening at the top. The pipe is a piece of bamboo about eighteen inches long by an inch and a quarter in diameter, highly polished and fancifully ornamented; a half dozen steel rods about the size of an ordinary darning needle; three or four bowls made of hardwood or earthenware with flat top, octagon sides and tapering to a point so as to fit into a hole in the side of the bamboo stem. The bowl seems to be a solid piece, the only opening apparent being a small one in the center of the flat top, little larger than the point of the steel needles. The opium box is generally made of horn with a tightly fitting top, but sometimes tin is used. The scraper is an ordinary pointed knife which is used to scrape out the pipe, and every particle of these scrapings is saved and worked over, and this stuff called "yen she," or second opium, is sold to the poorer classes. When enough is procured to make it an object then it is boiled in a copper kettle for six or eight hours, and the scrapings of opium cans mixed with it during the boiling process. When it has become cooked and of the proper consistency it is put back into cans and kept for two weeks, when it is ready for use, but the older it gets the more valuable it becomes and is considered superior to imported opium. It looks, smells, and tastes like genuine opium, but if used to excess is much more dangerous in its effects than new opium. The poorer classes can afford to buy this in five and ten cent doses and enjoy the novelty and effects of a smoke at small cost. They save the scrapings themselves when smoking and prepare it over and over again to save expense.

THE BEST OPIUM

Is called "lai yuen," and is purchased by weight, one "foon" being one mark on the scales, fourteen foons being worth twenty-five cents. Upon opening the box containing the opium a mixture is discovered about the consistency of tar and nearly as black. The odor is peculiar but not altogether unpleasant when first tried, but if sniffed at several times is apt to nauseate.

SMOKING THE DRUG.

After procuring a supply for our guide he proceeds to show the manner in which the "dope" is prepared and smoked. He takes a recumbent position on one side of the layout, picks up the stem and bowl, carefully adjusts the latter, takes one of the little rods and gathers a lump of the substance out of the box about the size of a pea. This he rolls back and forth on the flat top of the pipe bowl, every now and then holding it in the flame of the lamp, where it fizzles and sputters, sending out an odor that makes a novice feel as if he was just starting on his first sea voyage. He burns and rolls the drug alternately, frequently sticking the needle down into the small opening in the pipe, until finally it becomes hard and the right size to be pushed into the bowl. He then turns the face of the bowl to the lamp, places the stem in his mouth and draws a continous breath that makes the onlooker fear that an explosion may occur, nor does he stop the inhalation until the lamp of opium is consumed. He seems to hold his breath while he quietly proceeds to prepare another pipe and when again ready he exhales the smoke he has held in his lungs all this time, and the observer wonders if he has held his breath the while. He has not, but by some method known to the initiated he has retained the smoke until all of the poison it contained has been absorbed into his system.

THE EFFECT.

He repeats the act again and again until his movements become slower, a dreamy expression appears in his eyes, then they become totally expressionless, the muscles of his face relax, his movements are mechanical, suddenly he drops back on the pallet dead; no, not dead in the true sense, but as near as one can get to that mysterious stage and live. For an hour he remains in this stupor, then rises, takes a drink of tea from an urn that always sets near at hand, and goes out in the world hating himself and his fellow men, but only to return at regular intervals and repeat the seance.

THE SENSATIONS.

The sensations of the opium fiend while passing under the influence of the drug are few, but exquisite. At first the blood tingles in his veins, then courses through them with a rush, a pleasant warmth pervades his body, he seems to grow as light as air and suddenly feels himself vanish into nothingness, the transposition from the cares and turmoil of the world to the "pipe hitter's" heaven causing feelings of ecstatic bliss.

THE VISIONS.

Jules Vernes' fictions are realities. He traverses the mysterious depths of the oceans and reads the secrets of ages at a glance. A flash and he has encircled the world. Landscapes that would put to shame a vision of Paradise flit through his brain. A trip to the moon is but the twinkling of an eye, and he dashes onward to Sirius, the almost invisible sun, and waves a friendly salute to the inhabitants of Venus and Jupiter as he passes them by. He overtakes Biela's comet in its instantaneous flight and races with it, then waving it a cheerful adieu passes on into space and visits and hobnobs with the Pleiades. But see, he stirs! A long, deep sigh, almost a sob, and he rises to a sitting position. The drug has lost its effect, he rubs his eyes, looks languidly about, recognizes the familiar sights of the den, and murmurs, "Why did I not die?"

THE HORRORS AND HALLUCINATIONS.

When the fiend cannot procure his regular stipend of the "dope" he suffers all the tortures of the damned. Physical suffering is intense, sleeplessness, loss of appetite, an infernal craving that even alcoholic stimulant will not satiate, cramping and knotting of the muscles and tendons throughout his anatmoy accompanied by the most excruciating pain. He cannot remain quiet, he moves from one place to another in the vain hope that relief will come. He seeks the quieting effect of opium pills, morphine or anything that will give him temporary relief. He loses flesh and the agony that he is constantly compelled to endure drives him almost insane. If when exhaustion affords him a short respite from the physical horrors and he falls into a restless sleep, he is haunted by exagerated visions of venomous reptiles and insects that seem to bury their fangs and stings in his flesh, beasts like genuine opium, but if used to ex- with flashing eyes and foaming mouths drive him to desperation, and with a shriek and a wild effort to escape he awakes, simply to undergo again the agony of the waking hours. This goes on from day to day, the victim fleeing from the demon that follows him, and praying for death to relieve him. He would be willing to do any act to get one more pull at the pipe, and thus he keeps on until broken in mind and body he becomes a pitiful object and perhaps a gibbering idiot.

A NEW COURSE OF STUDY.

Some Suggestions From a Practical Teacher.

PARADISE VALLEY,
HUMBOLDT COUNTY, NEV., Feb. 7, 1895.

ED JOURNAL:—I have noticed in some of the Nevada papers that a new course of study for the various public schools is to be arranged, so as to bring the public schools in touch with the University.

If this move is to be a new emphasis laid on the three "r's," with Swinton in the lead, a set of dilletanti, elected in parlor caucus as a board of originators (?) heaven defend us.

If it is a new movement with the school workers of the State, investigating along the lines of new and original school work with the State Superintendent as a kind of pilot, heaven be praised.

I think the thought was to bring the public schools in harmony with the University. Who ever heard of building from the top downward, in house or ship, or tower or plant? Nor can men nor women be built that way. They always commence as little boys and little girls and grow upward into men and women. The foundation is laid in the home; the kindergarten, the primaries and if scientifically laid that is systematically with the best material and the structure be symetrically builded through grammar and high school grades, the boys and girls will demand a more progressive program from the University, when they reach it, as well as the University demanding something better from them than they get now.

No one is above the need of suggestions. I believe the difference between the progressive and crystalized nations is that the former are learning from every source and that the latter are sufficient to themselves.

Why doesn't the State Superintendent of Public Instruction ask suggestions from the teachers of this State, in regard to what each considers the best line of work for his grade? I am sure he would learn a few things that might be new to him and perhaps worthy of notice. If nothing new should be brought forth by such a course the teachers in this State must be on a par with—what? shall I say some of the school officials?

SUGGESTIONS.

I hope that the State Superintendent may see this paper, so I am going to make some suggestions unasked. Take them for what they are worth—in regard to the lines of work for the primaries.

First. Every primary room should be supplied with a good prism; the more the merrier—The color spots in the room are always a source of interest to the little folks, colored paper, a good microscope, a dozen would be better, and a recording thermometer and barometer. These are the necessities, not the maximum requirements.

Plants of Nevada—Not Massachusetts, nor North Carolina, nor the jungles of India.

Let the work to be done in plants come month by month from the office of the State Superintendent. After the work is completed by the children and the discoveries made by them recorded, let their best work be written and sent to the office of the State Superintendent, he selecting the matter to be printed by the State printing press on small leaves. After printing let the leaves be distributed to all the pupils of the same grade in the State for reading and spelling.

In this way it would not be many years before Nevada would have a botany of her own.

It would be desirable if in an addition to the program there would come each month suggestions as to the stories to be read in connection with the work, the songs to be sung, what parts of the planets were to be moulded, if there was any clay, what drawings made, what paintings, should there be any sewing of the forms on bristol board, to make what has been found out a fixture in the minds of the children.

Animal life of Nevada—not the kangaroo of Australia. This could be conducted like the plant work in furnishing reading and spelling lessons, etc. Shall we begin with the amœba, that changeable, ever varying form of lowest cell life, found in stagnant water, only with a microscope, and hunt up from it through the higher grades to insect life, and so on as a scientist works, or shall we commence with the magpie, then take the jackrabbit and wind up with earthworms, each teacher taking his own inspiration as a guide?

Science Work—Always a source of interest to the children. Why not have that work arranged? Say crystals one month, which crystals, which month, with directions for the experiments. Pressure and distribution of air one month, with directions for experiments. These are only given to illustrate. Reading lessons would grow out of this work.

Geography—The soil about us and what it will grow is more than circles and zones. The soil's constituent parts and the measure of each part tells the soil.

It is to be hoped that a better day is dawning for the schools of Nevada. A day when even the children shall be able to read the "ethics in the dust" about them. The lines of work are so progressive almost every where now that it seems too bad for Nevada to be in the lurch. The work for the North Atlantic States is not exactly the work for Nevada. Ferns are execrable there, sage brush here. Ferns are studied and classified there, why not study and classify sage brush here? The spectrum is the same everywhere, so are tints and lines and shades. Crystals of the same substance have the same forms everywhere. The snow, six-pointed; salt, cubical; alum, in double pyramids with bases joined, etc., etc. What applies to the whole world is here in Nevada besides the specialties.

If a right beginning can be made, even now, a foundation can be laid in the primary grades for all the work that is to be built up afterwards.

The kindergarten is presupposed. It is perfectly impossible to do good work with pupils in the grammar or high school grades with such faulty work in the primary grades as is generally done at the present time.

Another point. Is there never to be bible reading nor the Lord's prayer recited in a school in Nevada?

—TO ADVERTISE—

OUR COLLEGE

We will give a thorough course of instructions in Double and Single Entry Book-keeping and Commercial Arithmetic by mail FREE OF CHARGE to a limited number of persons. This course will be completed in forty lessons. No charge for Diplomas.

Our method of instruction by mail is far superior to that of any other school in the West. Hundreds of testimonials of our patrons, testifying to this fact, are on file in our office. The phenomenal success attained in this department prompted us to widely advertise our work, and to make it a special feature of our school.

The Instructions and Exercises

Are conducted by mail practically in the same manner as those in our College Rooms which makes them equal with personal instructions, and lead the student to a full and clear understanding of the science of accounts.

Our Mail Department

Is under the personal supervision of an able instructor, under whose guidance the highest degree of competency may be attained by correspondence.

We offer the above-named course free to introduce our work in your community. Avail yourself of this offer at once, and show the superiority of our work to your friends. Address,

RULES FOR SKATERS.

Captain Johnson Gives Timely Advice to the Venturesome.

Captain C. W. Johnson of the tug D L. Libbey and a resident of Winneconne, has, from a thorough knowledge of the difficulties and dangers which beset the skater, when he goes through the ice, compiled a list of precautionary measures, which he does not expect to be followed explicitly, but which he is in hopes will be heeded by the venturesome.

His timely warning contains excellent advice to all skaters, and the suggestions are as follows:

First.—When you go skating take a ball of strong cord, to one end of which is attached a heavy fish sinker, so that if any one goes through the ice you can stand far enough away from the hole and yet render them assistance by throwing the weighted end of the line to them.

Second.—If you go through the ice where there is a strong current, try and keep at the up river end of the hole. Rest your arm on the edge of the ice if possible, but do not attempt to climb out alone, for you will lose the strength which you will need when assistance arrives. If a person remains perfectly quiet, the cold water does not circulate through his clothes and his body remains warm. Use every effort to keep away from the down river end of the hole, for the current will sweep you under the ice in a twinkling.

Third.—If no help is near, rest one arm on the ice, raise the foot carefully and one skate can be removed very easily. Take off the other skate in the same manner, and then with these to aid you your safety is assured.

Fourth.—If you hear any one call for help, do not hasten to the spot unless you have a pole, bush or something that will be of assistance to them.

Fifth.—Best of all, keep off the ice under which there is a strong current.

Captain Johnson has saved 13 persons from watery graves during his lifetime. —Oshkosh Northwestern.

SENTIMENTAL FLAPDOODLE.

An American Family, Including a Dog, Make a Sensation In Paris.

An American family in Paris, according to Le Temps, has excited some notice in that sensation loving capital by its conduct over the death of a dog. The animal was a great pet in the family, and on his falling ill all the experts in dog maladies were at once summoned. As he persistently grew worse, he was taken to an establishment for the care of dogs, a sort of private hospital, and orders given that every attention and effort should be made to save him. Members of the family called two and three times a day to inquire for Kwik, as the dog was called; but, despite all care, Kwik died, and there was nothing left for the sorrowing family to do but bury him An undertaker was summoned and poor Kwik made ready for the grave An oak casket, fitted into a second one of lead, was prepared and a grave made in the private plot of a friend of Kwik's master at Vaucresson. All official red tape was duly complied with, and on the day of the interment the funeral cortege comprised three carriages.

The ceremony ended, the undertaker's bill of $90 was duly presented. This Kwik's mourners found so very moderate that the sum of $40 was added to be divided among the gravediggers.—New York Times.

A Pathetic Tragedy.

At the performance of the pantomime "Dick Whittington" at a London theater on Wednesday evening the leading actress, Kitty Tirrell, had just spoken a few lines, ending with, "His road to fortune he'll pave o'er my corse," when she fell in a faint, was carried out and died in her dressing room a few minutes later. Her husband, Harry Ewins, who played the clown as King Rat, had to appear during the rest of the performance as if nothing had happened. What makes the pathetic tragedy more than of local interest is the fact that the doctors testified at the inquest that the woman's death was undoubtedly caused by tight lacing. The pressure was so great that her heart stopped beating —London Correspondent.

He Hears With His Fingers.

James, the 10-year-old son of John Harman, a farmer south of this city, had spinal meningitis one year ago and was left practically deaf. Several months ago he happened to place his hand on his mother's throat while she was talking and found he could understand everything she said. He experimented with others and found that the sense of touch in his case would make up for the deficiency in hearing. He cultivated it and now is able to hold conversation by placing his hand upon the throat of those he is talking with. He places the ball of the fingers upon the larynx and understands perfectly.—Anderson (Ind.) Dispatch.
